The Alzheimer's Communication Cards

The Alzheimer's Communication Cards are sets of Cards designed to help communication during the middle and late stages of Alzheimer's disease when verbal/logical/speech patterns have deteriorated. The Cards allow the person with Alzheimer's, dementia, stroke or other related conditions to quickly see the concept they wish to communicate and then use the card to share this concept with caregivers and others. The Cards provide a voice for the individual to express complex ideas such as feelings, needs, or "things they need to say" when a normal conversation is not possible. It is often difficult for a person with Alzheimer's to describe aches and pains, for example; The Cards offer a simple but effective way to communicate this message. Finally, caregivers also have feelings and many times would like to communicate a message but cannot do so verbally. The Cards offer the potential for two-way communications.

The Standard Cards are designed for people who need communications to be simple, clear and concrete with minimum complexity. Each card's message is represented in one or two words plus a simple image that communicates the same idea. The core deck consists of 72 cards in eight different categories including: Food & Drinks, Emotions and Feelings, Aches and Pains, Activities and others.

The Advanced Cards are designed for people who can process complex sentences and ideas presented verbally. The complexity of the cards allows for more subtle in situations where the idea is clearly understood but difficult to express verbally. The core deck consists of 72 cards in eight different categories including: "Things I Need to Say," Important Places, Friends and Family and others. While this deck overlaps the Standard Deck our experience with caregivers suggests that it is valuable to have both decks available.

Please note that the purchase of either or both card decks comes with a free app that allows caregivers to use the cards on a mobile device. This is powerful way to speed communications because the user can see all cards and quickly narrow their selection to the ones of interest.
